ABSTRACT

A system and method for digitizing data written to an electronic ink display by a external device such as a stylus includes setting an element of the electronic ink display to one of a plurality of predetermined display states, modifying the display by writing to the display with the external device, and reading the electronic ink display to determine if the display state of the element has been modified by the external device.